

Scholarship to service: Leveraging Degrees for Global Health Impact

Dr. Thidar Pyone (PhD, EPH, MPH, MBBS)

- Thidar Pyone is a trilingual public health doctor with almost twenty years of experience in global public health and humanitarian settings. She has worked for a government public health agency (Public Health England), an academic institution (Liverpool School of Tropical Medicine, UK), and international non-governmental organizations (Terre des hommes Foundation and Aide Medicale Internationale). Thidar, who has a background in medicine (MBBS), holds a double Master of Public Health from the University of Sheffield, UK, and the University of Copenhagen, Denmark, under the Erasmus Mundus scholarship, Europubhealth programme. She obtained her PhD in health systems from the University of Liverpool, UK. Currently, Thidar works for the World Health Organization, a United Nations organisation, at its headquarters in Geneva, Switzerland.
- At this upcoming seminar, Thidar will discuss her life journey and the transformative role that higher education has played in her career. She will share insights on how to utilise academic qualifications to unlock opportunities and gain valuable learning experiences for personal and professional development.
